MAKING HISTORY

ebrary offers libraries the largest database of books in the Humanities available in full text, with over 4,500 titles covering the full range of subjects from history, literature, philosophy and religion, language and linguistics, music and the performing arts. It also includes a comprehensive collection of world “classics” in fields such as British and American literature, history, poetry, and drama.

At nearly 1,500 titles, the history category extends from ancient Greece to modern Pakistan. It includes a broad selection of monographs and a myriad of surveys and study guides supportive of both undergraduate and graduate study.

A particularly strong professional list in language pedagogy and linguistic theory anchors a category that includes many titles from traditional leaders in the field, such as John Benjamins and MIT Press.
